HISTORY'S "GIUNCO"

An almost forgotten story that was once part of the daily domestic and productive life of Salento.

The harvest of the bulrush took place in the summer with the full moon and the collectors were called "Sciuncari".

Once harvested it had to be selected and cleaned and then grouped in bundles and boiled.

Once pulled out of the water, the rush was put to dry in the sun for several days.

Let jump in the old time by the art and simple gestures of wearin. Rediscover this ancient tradition interweaving of the marsh bulrush, a plant with light and flexible stems, that wire after wire draws infinite textures telling out an deep bond with nature.

WORKSHOP'S PROGRAM

- Collection of the kit which will consist of a bunch of stalks of "marsh bulrush"
- 2nd Day: starting in the morning with the cleaning of the reed and, once done, you will light a fire and boil in large pots the bulrush. We will talk about the places where to collect the reed and the different plants that can be intertwined.
- In the afternoon we will proceed to the introduction of the basic techniques of the weaving of the bulrush.
- Each participant can make a small artifact.
